A work which has been delayed fourteen years is about to be done in St. Albans. The city water pipes are to be flushed, and the man who says that he cannot take a bath without being nauseated on account of the dirty water will have no excuse for not being clean hereafter. An occasional flushing of the St. Albans water system ought to make water more popular in that city, both for inside and for outside application.

A SELF-MADE MAN.

The death of Mayor Patrick A. Collins of Boston has called forth universal regret from all parties and from all peoples in whatever walk of life, for in his was recognized a type of a man that is unusual. In his life is a real exemplification of the self-made man. Starting in the lowliest conditions, working unremittently, studying assiduously and finally conquering by the force of his persistence, he rose to a position of more than local renown. In fact, his reputation was as wide as the nation, and everywhere Patrick A. Collins was known he was respected. Forced to give up school at the age of eleven years, he never gave up the struggle for an education, and while he was working in the coal mine of Ohio or the bench in Massachusetts, he still kept up his reading, finally entering the Harvard Law School and graduating therefrom, recognized politically as one of the most likely young men of Massachusetts, irrespective of party. Nor did his efforts stop there, for all during his life Mayor Collins was an omnivorous reader of that which elevates and expands. So it will be seen that work was the secret of his position in life. Mayor Collins realized this, for on his sixtieth birthday he remarked that if he had attained any success in life it was due to "hard and unremittent work." "Any man," said he, "who will make up his mind early in life that to be a success he must work hard, be industrious and honest, and stick to that idea, must, in the end, win." That he followed out the principle is to be seen by a study of his life, and that he succeeded is also to be seen in the study of the same. Speaking of that success the Boston Transcript, in an appreciative editorial, says: "His rise to success after he had demonstrated the strength of his qualities, was rapid, and he even had to refuse political opportunities that might have been his, in order to devote himself to his profession." He died in harness, the servant of the city which he loved and which had honored him in many ways, giving him at his second election the largest majority a mayoralty candidate ever received. He is a loss to his generation and a loss to the city, more perhaps, than it at present realizes."

a heating stove without a reputation, because it is low priced, and you take it home and put a fire in it and it does not do the work as you think it ought to, what are you going to do?

There is trouble ahead, no matter what is done.

You know, or, if not, it can be proved to you, before you take a genuine Round Oak home, that it is absolutely the best of all heating stoves. It is guaranteed—you are not allowed to take any chances.

We, therefore, advise our customers that it is economy for them to buy the genuine Round Oak.

We know that, for soft coal, with the new hot blast it makes the finest fire ever seen in a heating stove; that it will also burn hard coal (with or without magazine) to your perfect satisfaction; also, coke or wood, and it will last. How long do you think the ordinary cheap stove will stand up? There is a point it will pay you to look into. Only the genuine has the name "Round Oak" on the leg.
